

CBC Digital Readiness Checklist

A self-assessment for Kenyan school administrators, principals, and owners

Competency-Based Curriculum shifted what schools are expected to record, not just how much work there is to record. Most schools discover the gaps in their systems only when KNEC, a parent, or an auditor asks a question the paper trail can't answer quickly. Go through these five areas honestly — an unchecked box isn't a failure, it's a specific, fixable gap.

1. Competency-Based Assessment

- ☐ You can record a learner's rating per sub-strand, not only a single subject-level score.
- ☐ Evidence (photos, work samples, portfolios) is attached to the specific competency it supports, not filed separately from the rating.
- ☐ You can produce a KNEC-ready CBA/SBA export without re-typing marks from another system.
- ☐ A report card can show competency-level bands, not just a numeric average, without manual reformatting.

2. Daily Records & Attendance

- ☐ Attendance is captured daily per stream, not reconstructed from memory at exam time.
- ☐ A parent can see their child's attendance without phoning the office.
- ☐ Staff attendance is tracked separately from student attendance, not on the same register.

3. Parent Communication

- ☐ A term newsletter can go out to every parent in one action, not a WhatsApp message typed per class.
- ☐ Fee-balance reminders go out automatically at a set threshold, not only when someone remembers.
- ☐ There's a record of what was sent to which parent and when, in case of a dispute.

4. Fees & Finance

- ☐ Every M-Pesa payment is matched to a specific student's account automatically, not reconciled by hand at month-end.
- ☐ A receipt is generated the moment a payment is confirmed, not days later.
- ☐ A fee waiver or discount requires a second person's approval before it reduces a balance.

5. Data Continuity

- ☐ If your admin's laptop failed today, no student, financial, or health record would be lost.
- ☐ A new staff member can see relevant historical student data without asking around the staffroom.
- ☐ Records from a student who transferred or left are retained, not deleted with their user account.
